

KINGFISHER HEALING

INTRODUCTION TO THE SHAMANIC JOURNEY

(Based on original cross-cultural practices)

Co-Taught by Leta Kingfisher and Gizelle Rhyon-Berry

August 12-13, 2017 9:00 am to 5:00 pm

The Devic Centre, SK

Long before human civilization emerged, our tribal ancestors mastered abilities to probe beyond ordinary consciousness and discovered methods to bridge the gap between the human mind and spirit. There is a resurgence of interest today in the ancient ways of the shamans who explore mystical states of consciousness to find solutions to problems. Increasing number of westerners are learning to use the many thousand-years methods to access alternate dimensions of reality in order to make contact with sources of wisdom and power.

Founded on cross-cultural shamanic traditions, in this experiential weekend workshop participants will be introduced to the classic shamanic journey to other worlds and contact spirit helpers for advice, and for healing self and others. Upon completion, participants will be able to engage spirit power for personal guidance, offer spirit advice (divination) for others, bring power back to another person and install guardian spirits to homes and offices.

This workshop is the foundation for more advanced shamanic training offered by the instructors.

The Teachers:

Leta Kingfisher, a member of the Sturgeon Lake First Nation has more than twenty-five years of traditional Indigenous spiritual apprenticeship. She is the owner of Kingfisher Healing where she offers shamanic healing. She is a professor of Indigenous Studies and Psychology.

Gizelle Rhyon-Berry has recently retired from The Foundation for Shamanic Studies where she worked as a research associate and senior teaching faculty member for 25 years. Her passion for teaching is evident in her style, expressed with common sense simplicity and lighthearted humour. Gizelle is a passionate nature lover and gardener living a simple life on the West Coast of BC. She and her daughter produce most of their green food. Together, they attend to hundreds of wild and domesticated medicinal and food plants, including many at risk of extinction in their wilderness habitat.

Please note: We do not offer botanical tonics or mind altering substances in this workshop.

Early registration fee before July 29, 2017 is $295.00 and after this date $325.00
